Vine-

Dulcisopsis baccatus familiaris

This species is an extreme domesticated form of the wild mongoose, of which was genetically tampered with. Their common name ('Sweetfur Mongoose') shows just how they were changed- they were given false 'whiskers' made of glucose, which often melts over their fur due to the intense heat that the future possesses.

Grif/Myself-

Phagosanguis therfelis

This species is a feline-mimic often used to guard domestic species (such as the afore mentioned Sweetfur Mongoose, although this creature prefers the colder temperatures due to it's thick fur). This creature is a scavenger, and can survive off a diet of only blood, earning them the name of 'Blood Leopard'.

Autumn-

Eulampis branchianthos

The flower-winged carib is a species of hummingbird that evolved in a future where flowers grew into large, tree-like species. This creature is the largest hummingbird in the future, with a barbed bill similar to a harpoon that is used to rip the flower's stalks open, like a strange version of a woodpecker.

Arlo/Arl-

Ensicola ferrugo

This creature is the evolved form of an otter that was made to exist in mars-like conditions. The 'Swotter', as it is affectionately known in the scientific community, has a sword-like bone that grows out of the tip of it's mars-red tail. The bone-sword grows over time.

Prism/Kaleidoscope-

Gastrofragilis arquus

This creature (known as 'Arcuiris') is an alien species that has the unusual biological trait of having two stomachs- one which is real, and another, fake one they can regurgitate in the face of danger. This 'fake stomach' is fragile, and is extremely iridescent.

Key-

Velociraptor sativus

A species of reborn velociraptors genetically altered to become similar to guard-dogs. These domestic velociraptors- scientifically known as Acrocheloraptor (High Claw Plunderer), commonly called Acrochelos, are larger and more territorial than most V-Breeds. Their colours almost always consist of a metallic colour and a primary colour.

Oncilla-

Linheraptor tenax

A species of reborn linheraptor genetically altered to be livestock herders. The 'Micronychus' is specifically used to herd larger, more dangerous animals that are often feral to begin with. Their main-talon is serrated, and can regrow- useful, if they are to herd things such as tigers.

Ocean-

Telpelagicus olearis

This creature is an alien species that is coated in a thin layer of blubbery oil. Current speculation suggests this is due to their far-travelling tendencies, similar to whales. T. olearis's oil, however, is currently being studied in science to protect firefighters from intense flame.

Crow-

Obscurumel corax

A large, raven-like bird who grew on low-gravity planets. This creature (oft called the 'Blackhoney Raven') secretes a thick, honey-like black liquid from it's wingtips, allowing it to hunt down and eat larger, sometimes apparently apex, predators.

Fantasy/Lilac-

Lactinnotatus haliogala

Hailing from the same planet as the Blackhoney Raven, the 'Saltcap' is the apex predator that the bird-like creature hunts. This creature is a large, feline-like creature whom's sweat has near-deadly levels of salt and trace amounts of poison, making for a terrible combo.

Prim-

Electroderma delphis

A species of false-plants, who's flower's have the strange effect of making whomever touches them extremely conductive of eletricity. If digested, a child may become immune to static shocks and potentially, death via electrocution.
